The year ahead and Mercury retrogrades

2015

January 21, 2015 to February 10/11? Mercury Retrograde! In Aquarius! This retrograde pattern sets a tone for the new year, as it looks like this is what the rest of the year looks like, for Mercury Retrograde sets the tone.

A Very Midsummer Retrograde Venus

Venus Retrograde On June 5, 2015, Venus enters majestic and regal Leo. A very fixed sign, too. “Fixed” is a quality and to me, it implies a certain dogged determinedness, a special brand of tenacity. Very good stuff, usually.

However, with this Venus thing, at the tail end of July, July 25, Venus starts a retrograde pattern at the very beginning point of point of the Virgo sign. No, it’s not the beginning of Virgo, which doesn’t occur until later, August 23, but it is about some punctuation to the fiery Venus Retrograde, and not letting this one, last summer fling get out without a meteor-like spark in the sky.

Not going gently, and not going quietly. It’s a Leo thing. This Retrograde Venus action will compounded with Uranus, in Aries, going stationary and then turning retrograde, July 26. When the big planets seem to lose momentum, there’s perceptible timbre to the times. Don’t confuse Venus and Uranus, although, as planetary punctuation, the connection is clear.

Saturn bounces back and forth between the last few degrees of Scorpio and the first few degrees of Sagittarius. Saturn is taking a point and making sure it is understood. One of the more interesting ways to address Saturn?

The hack of Sony, the threat against the film “The Interview,” then the launch and then the minor celebrity status of the film on Xmas day. Two days after Saturn first graced Sagittarius.

This is a perfectly-timed, painful clear message about truth, bodily fluid jokes, and satire. In its limited release, the movie was much better.

The “air elements,” and the passion rewind, with Venus, in the summer months, this drags us all screaming and kicking into a year when “thinking” is set for an overhaul.
